	2. We list under two heads, (a) courier service, and (b), other trips.
	3. A regularly scheduled service of one trip per day to the pentagon, one trip to AEC, and five trips to some point central to State Department and CIA installations remaining in twould be of great advantage to OCI's courier service, saving an estimated eight man-hours per day in delivery times and assuring service during the presently unpredictable morning and evening rush hours. OCI has worked out a suggested schedule for these to obtainable if desired from Staff, ext.	own
	4. Estimates for trips other than courier service might be reduced, where the helicopter is of marginal advantage, better shuttle-bus service, greater availability of Agency cars, more generous provision for recompense for use of personal cars, and/or elimination of the rush-hour traffic tie-up that now place the headquarters practically out of physical communication Maryle and the District for two hours each day. Estimates are:	by es
